

creweroots

update
16th July 2008

Just a quick note to say thanks to everyone who turned out for Matt Thomason on Wednesday – great to see the room packed again – and thanks to everyone who has attended over the last nine months or so, what a long strange trip it's been. The point of the exercise was to put together a really eclectic set of performances that were unpredictable, brilliant and challenging (I think we managed that one!) and to end up not losing any money (and we've managed that one too, although when on earth we'll get to pay anything off the PA is another issue...). Over the run of the gigs the project has paid for itself and we've had a ball so thanks again to everyone who has helped.

The picture above is of our very own creweroots flier pixie with the very fabulous Mr Frank Sidebottom (at the Summer in the City festival last weekend in Manchester). After the photo, Frank leaned over to Sophie and said 'I think I blinked on that one'. Also on the bill that afternoon was John Smith – the first real independent event we put on some years back at the Hawk – and he said he's looking forward to coming back to play again. We're sorting out the date with him as we speak...

We are now officially on leave until after the summer. The festivals beckon and some of us are meeting up in strange parts of the country to scout out the next batch of delights for the creweroots night. Hope to see you all either at the festivals or back at the Cross Keys.

Happy days!
